Fresh Produce Centre
promotes the interests of companies that are active in the sale of fruit and vegetables and is also a source of knowledge and inspiration.

Consumers justifiably demand very high standards of food safety. What they want is the very best for themselves, their families and society. That is why strict standards are applied for the production, processing, packaging and distribution of fruit and vegetables.

Fresh Produce Centre engages in a constant dialogue with partners, in and outside the sector, nationally and internationally, with the objective of safeguarding food safety as well as possible.

Inspection and control are vital processes that contribute to securing the right quality levels and food safety. At each stage of the process, from production to the point of sale in the retail chain, the produce is monitored and inspected by companies themselves and by the government. The fruit and vegetable sector is the only fresh produce sector with its own inspection service, known as Food Compass. This enables consumers to rely on safe fruit and vegetables.
